BUILDING A LEAN-TO ## A QUICK FIX FOR THE KNF-7 TRAVELER

When the sun dips low and time's tight, a lean-to's your ticket out of a pickle. This sturdy slant keeps the rain off, the critters at bay – perfect for a night in Sector 9's rugged wilds.

How To:

1. Find a stout branch or pipe (3-4 feet long) and prop against a tree or boulder at a 45-degree angle.
2. Lean smaller sticks (1-2 feet) against it like ribs on a frame, spacing them 6 inches apart.
3. Cover with leaves, bark, tattered posters (those "Support Our Troops!" ads work swell), Add plastic sheeting from abandoned greenhouses-waterproof and rad-resistant.
4. Anchor with rocks or wire to hold against the wind.

Note:
"A lean-to's your first stand against the wastes-build it quick, build it smart!"

Tips:

- ▷ Angle it against the wind-those storms are meaner than a wet cat!
- ▷ Test the frame before settling in; a collapse is a tumble you don't need.
- ▷ Keep a tarp handy for extra cover.

BUILDING A DEBRIS HUT

A COZY COCOON FOR THE WEARY

Need a snug retreat in the KNF-7 night? The debris hut traps warmth and hides you from prying eyes-ideal for the cold ridges of Sector 18.

How To:

1. Set up an A-frame with two sturdy supports (trees or poles) and a ridgepole (4-5 feet long) across the top.

2. Lean sticks against the ridgepole at a steep angle, forming a triangular frame.

3. Pile on layers of leaves, grass, or glowing moss (Sector 9's eastern wastes) - pack tight for insulation.

4. Add a final layer of bark or cloth to seal it against rain.

Note:

"A debris hut's your warm embrace-make it thick, and sleep sound!"

Tips:

- Pack the debris snug-loose piles invite critters, and an uninvited boarder is no picnic.
- Use glowing moss for light; it's a boon in the dark!

BUILDING AN URBAN BUNKER

RECLAIMING THE PAST IN STYLE

Found a sturdy ruin? Turn it into an urban bunker to weather the wastes-perfect for Sector 11's Settlement Echo survivors.

How To:

1. Pick a room with solid walls and a ceiling that's not ready to quit.
2. Board up windows and doors with lumber or tin scraps, overlapping for strength.
3. Reinforce with heavy items-car doors or concrete blocks-especially against scavengers.
4. Add a hidden hatch or tunnel for an escape route.

Tips:

- ▶ Check the framework-a collapsing roof is a pressing worry!
- ▶ Camouflage with dirt to dodge scavengers' eyes.

Note:

"An urban bunker's your castle-shore it up, and hold the line!"

BUILDING A SUBTERRANEAN DEN

A SAFE HAVEN BELOW

When the surface turns sour, dig in with a subterranean den-tailor-made for Sector 9's burrowing worm territory.

How To:

1. Dig a hole 4-5 feet deep and wide enough to lie in
2. Shore up walls and roof with lumber or tin, sloping the roof for drainage.
3. Cover air entrance with a tarp or sheet metal, camouflaged with dirt
4. Carve air holes with mesh covers to avoid choking.

Tips:

Watch for burrowing worms-they'll chew through weak spots faster than a misstep!

Tips:

▷ Keep ventilation clear; air's your lifeline.
Tips: Keep ventilation clear; air's your lifeline.

Note:

"A den below keeps you safe-dig deep, and breathe easy!"

BUILDING A TREEHOUSE

A VISTA ABOVE THE FRAY

Fancy a view? A treehouse lifts you above the chaos—great for Sector 6's Silo heights.

How To:

1. Find a sturdy tree with strong branches and build a platform with planks and rope.
2. Add walls and a roof using tin or bark, securing with nails or vines.
3. Tie it down with extra rope to withstand 2025 storms.
4. Include a rope ladder or hatch for access.

Tips:

- Test the branches—a fall is a branch of trouble!

Note:

A treehouse is your high ground—build high, and stay safe!

A NOTE FROM POPS

Your shelter ain't just sticks and tin,
it's your lifeline. Pick high ground so you don't get washed away.
Get whatever's close at hand. Bark, scrap wood, hell, even old tires'll do.
Keep that roof sealed tight-acid
rain'll tear the life right outta you.
Build it to last and leave yourself a way out-just in case the wasteland
comes knockin."
